

Coccinella 7-punctata

Ekaterina Chamurliyska, MA, MSc
Clinical psychologist

Ladybirds are among the most beloved insects – because they are symbol of good and happiness, and probably because of the attractive red color of their elytra.

The popular name of Coccinella 7-punctata is ladybird. In European tradition ladybird is connected to the Holy Mother. The red color of its elytra represents the red cloak of Virgin Mary, and the seven black dots are signs of the 7 joys and 7 sorrows. The connection of the ladybird with Virgin Mary is not unusual. In 1991 Dr. Aw. Exell published his book “The History of the Ladybird”, where he quoted 329 various names of this insect in 55 countries, 80 of which are connected in a way to Virgin Mary and more than 50 are dedicated to God. There is also the opposite – one of the Italian names of the ladybird is Galinetta del Diavolo, i.e. Devil’s bird. Other interesting names are the Swedish Himelska nyckla or Key to Heaven, and the Cherokee Great Beloved Woman.

*Ladybird ladybird fly away home,
Your house is on fire and your children all gone.
All except one whose name is Anne
Who hid herself under the frying pan.*

This is the east-Australian version of a little song, which exists in all English-speaking countries under one or another form since its creation in XIX c. Its occurrence shows the strong “presence of the ladybirds in humans’ mind.

The Bulgarian contribution to the “ladybird-ology” is a nursery song “Ladybird, Ladybird, show me the way, show me the way, where I’ll go to marry”.

The insect is put on the palm and where it flies, from that direction the suitor will come.

There are more than 5000 species of ladybirds all over the world. Almost all of them are carnivorous since the larva stage and eat aphids (plant lice). Only several species are “vegetarians”. Ladybirds may be small (up to 0,3 mm) to medium (10 mm), their head is retractable in the the dorsal surface of the first thoracic segment. The antennae are usually 11 segmented, short and clubbed, the elytra completely cover the abdomen.. The legs are short and retractable under the body. The blood (haemolympha) is like repellent (chasing the insects) and smells quite unpleasantly, because it contents (with some species) various alkaloid toxins (adaline, coccinelin, exohomine, hypodamine etc.). The haemolympha is yellow and its repellence and toxicity are a defense mechanism against carnivorous. Some people state that the bright colors of the adult beetles (red over black or black over red) are aposematic, which means that their colors are a warning for the potential enemies that the beetle is unpleasant or poisonous.

The Ladybird life cycle is similar in many species, the adults overwinter often in large groups in any place that is out of the wind. Breeding generally begins in May, but is dependant on the weather, and the presence of food. Egg laying continues on into July with each female laying as many as 1 000 eggs in some species. Many of the carnivorous species lay their eggs near aphids, ensuring their young a supply of food . Eggs hatch depending on temperature, ranging from 10. days at 15C to 2 days at 35C.

The larvae when small are often smaller than the aphids they are eating. A 7 Spot Ladybird larva will consume more than 300 aphids before it pupates.. Emergence depends on temperature. The pupal skin splits along the back and the adult climbs out. The elytra are a pale yellowy-orange at this stage but soon brighten up after a few hours or days. The new adults then feed for a few weeks before dispersing and looking for food somewhere else.

All beetles have enemies, and ladybirds make no exception. The most widely spread parasitoid is the braconid wasp Perilitus coccinella. It attacks adult ladybirds and to a lesser extent larvae and pupae.

Ladybirds are considered beneficial for the biological control and balance because they are predators of Homoptera or Acarina. That is to say that gardeners and farmers bless them because they resolve or at least decrease pest problems.

Proving of *Coccinella 7-punctata

The idea to make a homeopathic proving of ladybird came to me spontaneously after a prescription of the famous Indian homeopath Dr.Mahesh Gandy, who was in Bulgaria. The patient to whom he recommended this remedy liked very much to play with ladybirds, she had dreams of flying and kept in her something from that time, now, when she was mother of two children with successful career. She still had the childishness in her. She needed constant care and she said that she was feeling the best during her second pregnancy, when everybody around her paid attention to her.

The proving was done during a seminar in Sofia, with students from the course of the Homeopathic Society and London International College of Homeopathy. 8 volunteers took part – 7 women and one man, who dropped out later, because he took through carelessness another remedy one week later. Prover № 7 (G) dropped out too, because she took another remedy one week later.

Two homeopathic preparations have been used – the first one (№1) was prepared by the Bulgarian representative of Helios – MPh. Temenuga Sotirova, the second one (№ 2) was prepared by me personally. (As Hahnemann recommended – it is well that the homeopath prepare the remedies them selves). The ladybirds were gathered in May 2004 in an ecologically clean area – the village of Dolna Bania (near to Sofia).

I was the only one to know what remedy was to be proved, and I didn't participate in the proving myself, I just summarized the results.

Nota bene:

During this proving, some synchronic events occurred (as per Jung). Causal thinking is linear, while the synchronic thinking is field like and this is not a simple analogy with modern physics. With the causal thinking we have consecutiveness and causality, whilst with the synchronic one we ask what happens TOGETHER WITH, IN THIS VERY MOMENT.

The experiences of three of the provers are interesting in this sense – the one had a dream of being threatened with knife, threaten of murder and the other one really lost her favorite dog, which was virtually slaughtered by a sadist alcoholic, the third one was bitten by a dog (real event).

In the homes of three provers during the proving (in January) appeared... ladybirds!
